THE INTERNATIONAL REGATTA.

Last Day of the Rowing Matches to crowd and elbow and jockey, and she keeps 200 feet east over on her own water and at only 43 to the miante. She belds her own, no more; but is not that enough with the champions of the world against her?

ON THEY TERE UP THE COURSE,
London dropping now to forty-two and the Hallgonians steady, and when they reach the half which is ahead scarce any one can tell. Both have kept too far east, and now both work over, and as they head for the western bank and near the the middle of the opstretch, to the general surprise and delight, Sam Slick's beys are ahead. Yes, away shead, a clean hundred feet or more, and this, too, seemingly, without one spurt or aught else than ctear, steady, powerful rowing. Now they near the mile, and the Thames men, who have never steered over-well, commence the elbowing, for Hallfax has laid her track less than seventy feet east, and the temptation is hard to resist. Out charply rush the watermen quickening up their stroic and make a shot for the Bluenose radder poat. Not at present, for Hallfax gives way and glides a little cast, smartening up, too, enough to make everything secore aft. Now they try it again, and again with the result, and then, again, Maybe it is just for the edification of the cager watchers from the steambeat. Well, its a success entirely, for they all keenly onloy the sport, disreputable as they regard it. At an eighth past the mile, London how at forty-one and well astern, aims straight for her turning post, while Nova Scotia has been too far west latterly and has to work out briskly eastward to make her's all right. Watch them as they turn, or rather look at your watch. What! Eight minutes and twenty seconds when Halliax's starboard oars hold and her side begans to chook of all right. Watch them as they turn, or rather look at your watch. What! Eight minutes and twenty seconds when Halliax's starboard oars hold and her side begans to chook over all right. Watch them as they turn, or rather look at your watch. What! Eight minutes and twenty seconds when Halliax's would have been to-day. No wonder their friends thought shey might well risk sending those watermen away across the broad Atlantic and face all comers." "But what was normal state of their four quiet shermen so well, and what was really fast work so well that, after much time and expense and painstaking, they bad them here to-day. Now they go about Halifax getting closer than ever to the eastern back, and momentarily heading down it. Had London kept anything like as carefully and honestly in her own water she would have deserved some credit. Now came more of her generalship, for Elliott, the beat builder, well said teningli, "Every man in that beat is a general."

Halifax was away from the stake casely first, and minding her own business beautifully. Everyone thought she had the race nicely in hand, but the shape of the course necessitates that to row anywhere nearly the same distance as far, not further, than her Western rival, she must, sooner or later, down the course work west gradually. She begins to, and edging more and more, though still clearly well over in her own water, and now Conlon's time has come. If she went to the stake a little tired look at her now, for she left it flicking, and again

Clean up to forty-six, she passes—yes, passes Halifax at best by a few feet, and then rows on. But has she not the right? Surely she has if she does it fairiy. But where is she? Clean over the line between Halifax's rightful course and her own, and rowing, as we thought, in Halifax's water, though not far from her own. But why does she not get back, for her own water is the shorter? The next indinte tells; for at 10m, 40s, from the start, or 2m. 20s, from the turn, about two-fifths of a mile of rowing, maxing allowance for the seconds lost in turning, stop, slap, slap go the English boat on the two hows yawed onto the strip quite near, the two bows yawed onto little, with London a little about 90 the first house of the stern of in the boat of the Nova Scottains. Actually its blade shot up three feet high, and as half, while Nova Scotla looked tired. But if the land that sired Donald Mackay, the prince of American shipbuilders, was not up to all London's tricks, she had tens of the grand, simple, manly pluck all true men, no matter what their nation be, admire; and hesitating but a moment, down she lius again to her work, and now see who is doing the busileness. Well might Geiston, when he saw his countrymen during the next two minutes, say, "Theyr'e rowed out," for those staleart torcra by the sea were now up on their quarter; now levelyes, level; and now, like a flash, they send their bow to the fore—and by feet, and almost yards every stroke. Tired they were, no doubt. Any honest man could not have rowed that race that far and been otherwise, but they knew enough to knew that when fair, clear rowing had to be abandoned and jockeys' tricks resorted to, some other people were also tired, even though this this summer they had never rowed a boat race; they knew enough to know that now had come the turning polit in this giants' battle, and that if stamina and skill and downright pluck had a good head to guide them they might yet and just now win. And the head was there, and from that point home

Scoland Was RMAIKX,

hopelessity beaten. She did not steer well; her men were purplish red, and well and tree, and they and just how win. And the head was there, and from that point home

Scoland Was RMAIKX,

hopelessity beaten. She did not steer well; her men were purplish red, and well and tree, and the purplish red, and well and a steel fit danger overboard. This is rather late. Had be done it half a mile from the finish, stops, and higgins, reaching out with his right hand, catches up the port rudder wire which now, or, at least, after he gets hold at of it, dangles overboard. This is rather late. Had be done it half a mile back it would have been more convincing. But how was it they managed to jump away to lively stire the fraces and keep bouncing along at so raiding a pace if all this time the wire was out if of order? What took a week ago to do half the distance, and that including the seconds lost in stopping. London does not cross, but wheels about to the east, lies off and awaits the referee, "Up," calls the Nova Scotia bow; "he was heading for the other shore; I want'l going to the other shore; I had to make a straight course," meaning, apparently, that he was cut off entirely from all chance at the short western side at all, but kept crowled out to the long eastern one. But now comes the decision.

Sr. Joun, N. B., Sept. 6, 1876. The defeat of the St. John crew at Philadelphia causes great disappointment in sporting circles. An exerces great drappointment in sporting circles. An evening paper gives expression to the general sentiment, saying:—"Without going deeply into causes the prevailing view of it is that our men owe their defeat to the undoubted feet that they are not as good physically as they were eight or ten years ago. Some of them have passed the meridian of life, and others are verging on it. Most persons will agree with us that they should give place to younger men."

RARE SPORT AT NEWPORT.

THREE WELL CONTESTED RUNNING RACES-HIGH-POLO GAMES WITH THREE ON A SIDE. NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 6, 1876.

Some rare sport for Newport took place on the polo grounds this ofternoon to addition to pole. It consisted of three running races. The first was for the Bennett Cup and the distance was 100 yards. The entrance fee of $5 was to go to the second, as it did also in the two following races. The second race was for a silver cup and spoon, the distance being fifty yards. This was a best race, the best two in three. The third race was the best of all and was for a subscription cup, 150 yards, and in going over the distance they were to jump over four hurdies three feet high. S. Nicholson Kane and A. Wright Sandford, both of New York, were selected as judges and gave satisfaction to all concerned. For the first race there were tour entries-viz., F. L. Hart, of Montreal; Frank Abbott, of Boston; Charles Harris, of New Frank Abbott, of Boston; Charles Harris, of New York, and Captain Cowden, of Her British Majosty's Sixtieth Riffles. They appeared to be in excellent time for the race, and each was confident that he would carry off the price. After two takes starts they got the word "Go!" with Hart leading and Harris second. The latter toward the fluish sparted ahead in good style and came in the winner, Hart second, Cowden third and Abbott last. Time, 11 1-5 seconds.

and came in the winner, Hart second, Cowden third and Abbott list. Time, II 1-5 seconds.

THE SECOND RACE.

After waiting about afteen minutes the second race, for the cup and spoon, was called. For this race there were three entries—viz., "Richard Robinson," Harris and Abbott. Harris came in first and "Robinson" second in the first heat. Time, 6 seconds. The second was a dead heat between Harris and Abbott. Time, 6 seconds. Before the third and last heat they wanted ten minutes rest, which was granted them by the judges. "Robinson" did not, of course, participate in the last heat, as the conditions were the best two in three. Harris and Abbott got away is good style, the former-keeping the lead the entire distance and thus winning the cup. Time, 5 4-5 seconds.

THE THIRD RACE.

For the race for the Subscription Cup there were three entries—viz., William C. Rives, Jr., of Boaton and Messre Hart and "Robinson" hart was the favorite. "Robinson" decared the first hurdle ahead, but Hart took the lead at this point and jumped the other three in grand sivie ahead of his compositors, who, however, were at his heads when the last hurdle was cleared. Time, 213-5 seconds.

was appreciated by the large and fashionable addience present, and many of the ladies left their carriages and came to the centre of the lot, where they could have a setter view of the faces.

SPIRITED POLO GAMES.

Three very interesting and closely contested pologaness followed, with three on a side, and the spectagames followed, with three on a side, and the specta-tors frequently applauded the players. No more spir-ited games have taken place this sesson, and it clearly proved that with three on a side the games were mor-interesting, at least for the speciators, than with a larger number.

HAMPDEN PARK RACES.

SPRINGPIELD, Mass., Sept. 6, 1876. The second day of the Hampden Park Trotting Meeting was fair and the races interesting. In the 2:29 Trio, the favorite, was lame and was withdrawn after the second heat. Gray Bill and Bay won the first and second heats, but Planter, second favorite, took the next three. In the 2.22 class, Sam Pardy was the favorite. Amy cast a shoe and was distanced in the first heat and Bella won the race easily in three straight heats. Amy alternard trotted a mile in 2.22 For the 2.29 class—Pares $2,500.
